

Severe Weather Support: Winter Storm Juno

WWW.LifeScopeEAP.com

As Winter Storm Juno threatens the Northeast, with the potential for strong winds, coastal flooding and more than 2 feet of snow, please be reminded that LifeScope is available 24/7 at 877-739-3989. Whether seeking emergency resources, temporary housing, or emotional support, LifeScope counselors can assist benefits eligible faculty and staff and their dependents in impacted and threatened areas.

Extreme weather preparedness and recovery tip sheets can be found on the LifeScope website. Log on to www.LifeScopeEAP.com (username: northeastern university / password: guest), and search under Living+/Safety, or type the following titles into the search bar:

- * Are You Ready? Assemble a Disaster Supplies Kit
- * What You Need to Know When the Power Goes Out Unexpectedly: Part 1
- * What You Need to Know When the Power Goes Out Unexpectedly: Part 2
- * What You Need to Know When the Power Goes Out Unexpectedly: Part 3
- * Winter Storms and Extreme Cold: Before, During, and After-Part 1
- * Winter Storms and Extreme Cold: Before, During, and After-Part 2

Please note that blizzard warnings are in effect Monday through Wednesday along the coast from central New Jersey to the Canadian border, including the cities of New York, Boston, Providence, Hartford, and Portland. The National Weather Service cautions against travel late Monday and Tuesday, and anticipates flight cancellations, major delays and possible airport closures. Also expect school, business, and public transportation closings or delays.

For winter weather advisories and additional safety tips, stay tuned to your local news channels, the National Weather Service (www.noaa.gov), and the Weather Channel (www.weather.com)

Your safety and well-being are our top priority.

Always Available. Always Confidential. | 877-739-3989 | www.LifeScopeEAP.com